

Roberto Chang is a Distinguished Professor at Rutgers University and a Research Associate at the National Bureau of Economic Research. Previously he was an Assistant Professor at New York University and a Research Officer at the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta. He has also served as a visiting faculty member at Princeton University and Columbia University. In 2020 he is a BP Centennial Professor at the London School of Economics.

Professor Chang has published extensively on monetary economics, exchange rate policy, and financial crises. He has been an editorial board member of the Journal of International Economics and the Journal of Development Economics, a member of the Economics Panel of the National Science Foundation, and an advisor and consultant for financial and policy institutions including the IMF, the World Bank, the BIS, and the Inter American Development Bank.

Professor Chang is a native of Peru and holds a Ph.D. in Economics from the University of Pennsylvania. He currently lives in Westfield, NJ.